Soloist on the Soundtrack

by Amy Miller

TIMOTHY FAIN (Violin '98) is no stranger to the silver screen, having appeared in the 2010 Academy Award-winning Black Swan and several other film projects. He recently returned to the studio to record the soundtrack for the critically acclaimed 12 Years a Slave, based on the book of the same name by Solomon Northup, a free black fiddler in New York who was kidnapped and forced into slavery in the 1840s. Tim reflects: "It was a wonderfully unique experience performing the on-screen music for 12 Years a Slave, which I co-arranged (with my good friend, composer Nicholas Britell, who also wrote original music and spirituals for the film).

"We were involved quite early in the production of the film, and worked hard to get the right vibe and sound for the lead character's violin playing," notes Tim. Solomon Northup, played in the film by Oscar-nominated Chiwetel Ejiofor, "was a well-educated fiddle player, who might very well have been influenced by the classical traditions of Europe. Striking the right balance between these styles was a challenge, but to see it all come together on the big screen has been thrilling! Chiwetel did a mighty impressive job of looking like a violinist, and the film itself is chilling, devastating, and powerful.

"I'm really honored to have been a part of it." ♦
